Extract of a Letter from Richmond, March 14.

SIR,

AGREEABLE to my Promise the first Opportunity I tried the Efficacy of the Oriental Vegetable Cordial for Complaints in the Stomach and Bowels; while on a Visit in the Country I happened to meet a very extraordinary Case, where, after a variety of different Medicines, by the Advice of several eminent Physicians to little Effect, I desired them to try your Cordial, which they procured, and it not only gave him immediate Relief, but perfectly restored his Health; for the Benefit that might accrue to the Public from this Medicine, I desired the Apothecary to draw up a State of the Patient's Case, which he did

CASE.

The Patient having been afflicted for several Years past with a Disorder in his Stomach and Bowels, which began with flatulence and shifting Pains internally, his Digestion became by Degrees extremely vitiated, his Head frequently confused; he had sometimes a Dizziness, especially on stooping; sometimes he had a Noise in his Ears, and he was often troubled with Evacuations, his Sleep was much disturbed with Dreams, and he frequently lay awake during the greater Part, sometimes the whole of the Night; from these various Causes, his Constitution, from being healthy, and even vigorous, was, in a short Time, much reduced. At first he considered the Complaint as only accidental and temporary, but finding the Symptoms increase, he had Recourse to different Advice, and in the Space of a Twelvemonth he consulted several eminent Physicians, whose Opinions generally concurred, with little Variation, in pursuing one and the same Method of Cure. He strictly complied with the Prescriptions, but without any material Effect; at last, despairing of Relief from all the Effects of medical Skill, he determined to seek for Refuge among the advertised Medicines, said to be efficacious in Disorders of a similar Nature to that under which he laboured, and had tried several without any Effect; he was now on the Point of abandoning the Use of Medicine, when Providence put you in his Way to recommend the Trial of the Oriental Vegetable Cordial; he laid hold of it with the Avidity natural to one who had exhausted every Resource, and took the Quantity prescribed in the Bill. No sooner had it reached his Stomach and Bowels than he felt an Alleviation of his Pain; and repeating the Dose according to the Directions, the Pain entirely ceased, and, by continuing the Use of the Cordial, in a few Weeks was perfectly restored to his Health and Strength, to the Astonishment of all who had seen him during the Continuance of his Disorder. I have the additional Satisfaction to inform you, that in consequence of this unexpected Recovery, I have tried the Cordial with equal Success in several Persons who were afflicted with Disorders in their Bowels. Some of those Complaints had been imputed to catching of Cold, others to Intemperance, extremely common, and often productive of dangerous, if not fatal Consequences.

Having now informed you of the Success attending this, I assure you that I shall take every Opportunity that offers in future to make further Trial of so valuable a Medicine, and shall not fail to communicate to you occasionally the Result of its Effects.

I am, SIR,
Your most obedient Servant,
EDWARD HAWKINS,
